Growing up in refugee camps, she quickly became a leader in the organization, Mama Maquin, which fought for women's participation in the refugee return to Guatemala in 1993. After the return, she was elected to the Parent's Commim&ttee of the New Dawn Maya Middle School to provide indigenous-centered education for youth in her community.

Come spend some time with her and learn about the struggles she and her people face as well as the positive things they are accomplishing.
